2. Citations and explanations (Rule 70.7)

The present application relates to the polypeptide MF3 from Pseudomonas fluorescence which confers resistance of plants to microbial diseases and/or to attack of plant parasites. A method of isolating and purifying MF3, the DNA sequence encoding MF3, vectors and host cells, a composition comprising MF3 (or an active fragment or a functional derivative thereof) and a method of acquiring resistance of plants to microbes and parasites are described.

Reference will be made to the following documents cited in the International Search Report:

D1) Database Uniprot [Online], accession no. Q887W2, 1 June 2003, retrieved from EBI.

D2) Database Uniprot [Online], accession no. Q9I5A3, 1 March 2003, retrieved from EBI.

D4) Plant Science, 152: 123-134 (2000), Godoy A. V. et al.

D5) Abstracts of the General Meeting of the American Society for Microbiology, 102: 314, abstract no. N-53, Spencer M. & Anderson A.

D1 discloses an amino acid sequence which has 89,4% identity with SEQ ID NO:1 of claim 1.

D2 discloses an amino acid sequence which has 86,96% identity with SEQ ID NO:1 of claim 1.

Neither in D1 nor in D2 is it disclosed that the amino acid sequence, which sequence is very similar to SEQ ID NO:1, could render a plant resistant to microbial disease or attack of parasites.

Supplemental Box

In case the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient.

Continuation of: BOX V

D3 describes an MF2 protein derivable from Bacillus thuringiensis and the use of said protein as plant protectant.

D4 relates to cyclophilins which have an enzymatic activity of peptidyl-prolyl cis-trans isomerase and which are thought to be involved in plant response to environmental stresses.

Through D5 it is known that the Pseudomonas inhibits the growth of several plant pathogens and therefore has potential as a biocontrol agent.

Documents D1-D5 represent prior art and are not considered to be relevant for the assessment of novelty and inventive step of claims 1-10.

The invention according to claims 1-10 is novel and is industrially applicable.

In the present claim 3, the expression "the bioactive polypeptide MF3" is not sufficiently defined (see also Box VIII). The method according to claims 3 and 4 must be restricted to the introduction of the bioactive polypeptide MF3 which has the specific amino acid sequence of SEQ ID NO:1 (or an active fragment or a functional derivative thereof) in order to fulfil the requirement of inventive step for the entire scope of said claims.

Thus, due to the present wording, claims 3 and 4 are considered to lack an inventive step.

The wording of claim 8 should correspond to the wording used in claim 1. The expression "isolated components" is ambiguous and unclear. In order to specify the subject-matter of claim 8 the wording of claim 1 should be introduced into the claim. It is however also desirable to keep the present indication in the claim that the bioactive polypeptide MF3 of SEQ ID NO:1 (or an active fragment or a functional derivative thereof) is isolated.

The invention according to claims 1, 2 and 5-10 fulfils the requirement of inventive step.

Box No. VIII Certain observations on the international application

The following observations on the clarity of the claims, description, and drawings or on the question whether the claims are fully supported by the description, are made:

The term "the bioactive polypeptide MF3" used in claim 3 is vague and undefined and leaves the reader in doubt as to the meaning of the technical features to which it refers, thereby rendering the definition of the subject-matter of said claim unclear (Article 6 PCT).
